hormonal sensitivity of the hair follicle, leading to the most common type of alopecia, androgenic alopecia, is inherited from the mother in 73-75% of cases, and another 20% is inherited along the father line. The remaining 5-7% are triggered by external negative factors – stresses, poor ecology, incorrect eating habits. The number is curious. However, they will not relieve the bitter feeling of balding people. Those who are faced with the problem of hair loss are more interested in another question: can this process be reversed?

Inserting the grafts with too much care about the grafts' angle.

IN WHAT CASES THE HAIR TRANSPLANTATION IS THE ONLY SOLUTION?

In the androgenic type of hair loss, the cause lies in the increased content of male sex hormone testosterone in the blood (5-20 times less it is contained in women, which also can lead to hair loss). On the frontal parietal and temporal areas of the head, the most vulnerable hair bulbs grow, which quickly “capitulate” under the hormone influence. The peak values of testosterone are on puberty and reproductive age (from 18 to 50 years). Therefore, the first bald spots on the temples can arise not on old age, but already in the twenties. A cardinal decision for those suffering androgenic alopecia becomes the transplantation of their own hair from the occipital region to the empty areas. If therapy does not help, it is advisable to resort to hair transplantation no later than on the sixth stage of alopecia. On the seventh stage there are also chances, but only certain methods will be suitable, the work will be labour-intensive and multi-staged. And at the final, eighth, stage, there simply will not be enough donor material for transplantation.

In addition, there are general contraindications, in which hair transplantation is impossible. Among them:

- poor blood coagulability – even minimal trauma to the skin can cause bleeding;
- a number of diseases of the nervous system;
- the presence of autoimmune diseases such as HIV and lupus erythematosus – affect the risk of infection and poor hair survival;
- local skin diseases (dermatitis, eczema, folliculitis) in the stage of exacerbation.

The decision on cancellation or temporary postponement of the procedure is made by the surgeon, taking into account the patient's anamnesis. In the absence of restrictions, it remains only to choose the appropriate method of "hair migration".

DHI could be done in two straight days for huge bald areas.

DHI (DIRECT HAIR TRANSPLANT) FIXES HAIR AT LUNCHTIME

The so-called direct hair transplantation is gaining increasing popularity in beauty clinics. It allows the representatives of the stronger sex, suffering from alopecia, to solve their problems literally at lunchtime.

DHI Hair Transplant in Istanbul is often called a "lunch break procedure" because it is many times shorter than traditional transplantation. The procedure does not require any surgical operations or long stay in the clinic. It is performed under local anaesthesia for one and a half to two hours.

During this time, doctors take hair follicles from the back of the head, where usually there is never any baldness in order to transplant them to the forehead or top of the head. DHI Hair Transplant in Istanbul is carried out using a special tool with a diameter of less than a millimetre, which avoids scarring. The surgeon removes hair from the dense part of the head and transplant directly into those areas of the skin that already suffer from lack of hair.

WHY IS THE DHI METHOD IS SO GOOD?

It's completely different technique than the FUT method which is a conventional way of hair transplantation which the main move is cutting the scalp of the donor area. Despite its wide use, the FUT method has many flaws and the biggest is that it leaves scars behind the skull.

Before DHI method appears, most people used FUE technique. This technique requires using the follicular units which are taken with a tiny scalpel. The main advantage of this method is that it doesn't leave scars, but it has certain limits, especial regarding the surfaces that are grafted. This procedure is very laborious and it can cause a risk of damaging hair roots. Also, this procedure takes too long and doesn't meet the most important things for the patient which are quick results and fast recovery. It's also important to note that this method doesn't care about the transplantation method i.e. direction and depth, often transplanted hair looks unnatural.

The DHI procedure works in that way that the hair follicles are extracted from the donor area one by one and then, with a slight delay or directly, they're implanted into the bald area. This allows the hair follicle to survive and growth of the hair is maximized because the time when hair is outside the patient's skin is reduced to a minimum.

For the procedure, surgeons use only tools with a small diameter which are less than 1mm, much smaller than on other methods. Using these tools, surgeons don't make holes, scars and injuries of the skin are minimized.

The hair follicles are transplanted directly from the donor to the area that needs correction, the contamination risk is minimal. Also, the healing process is drastically shortened, as the patient with just one visit, can continue with his normal daily routine with some necessary recommendations prescribed by the surgeon.
